

Deborah Hodgson

Traipsing the streets of South Wales with a vegetable rack full of buckets and brushes may not be the most glittering start to a career in music, but for Deborah Hodgson folk singer this was the catalyst, earning her first guitar as a child by washing the (bottom half) of cars.

Although petite, Deborah Hodgson's natural charm and enchanting voice can fill any stage and bewitch an audience whatever the venue, whether she's sat on a rusty oil drum singing at a festival in a farmers field, performing at a lavish castle wedding, in the underground crypt of a cathedral or at a major arena supporting 10CC.

Deborah Hodgson will be appearing at the club on 3rd June. You can get a preview at www.debhodgson.com
